Sealed Cans. Public attention was very generally called to this subject last year by Arraya. BURNHAM & Co., of Philadelphia, manufacturers of "Arthur's Patent Self-Sealing Cans and Jars," and large numbers of families all over the country were induced to try experiments, no: only with Arthur.s Cans, but with a variety of other cans offered to their notice. Arthur's Can, which is the simplest in construction and the easiest to use, is moreover the only one that we have ever seen, with a single exception, that is constructed on right scientific principles. In the exception referred to, the can itself is in all respects less desirable, and few would have any hesitation in choosing between them. Arthur's can is entirely open at the top, with a channel around the mouth filled with cement. It is scaled by heating the lid and pressing it into this coment, which is done in a moment. The coment is in the channel when the can is sold. The cans sustain no injury in opening, and may be used year after year. They are made of tin; and also of fire-proof earthen ware .-We have thus par icularly referred to this can guish it from all others. It is without doubt, the best yet offered to the public, and in an article of this kind only the best should be taken. We have used them ourselves, and know their quality. So have scores of our

Cans offered to the public last year, and there will, in all probability, be a greater number during this season. Not one that we have soen hears any comparison, in our estimition, with 'Arthur's,' and our advice to all is, to try no other can or jur next year. This one will certainly keep fruit precisely in the condition in which it is scaled up, is simple in construction, and easy of use, and cannot, we believe, be equaled, far less excelled, by any vessel got up for the purpose of keeping fruit in a fresh condition by her-
